

GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF NEW ZEALAND
NEWSFLASH 45

It with regret that the Geological Society notes the deaths of three people who had long associations with geology in New Zealand. Gerald Lensen and Fred Bowen were two former members of the Geological Survey, having joined in 1949 and 1952 respectively. Both were active field geologists with Gerald, later in his career, being a pioneer in the documentaion of Late Quaternary faulting. Fred is perhaps best remembered for his work on the coalfields. Joan Wellman, wife of the late Harold (H.W), also recently died. The Society extends it sympathies to the families of the above.
